Publications

THE AMERICAN SCHOOL OF CLASSICAL STUDIES AT ATHENS (ASCSA) advances knowledge of Greece in all periods, as well as other areas of the classical world, by training young scholars, sponsoring and promoting archaeological fieldwork, providing resources for scholarly work, and disseminating research. The ASCSA is also charged by the Hellenic Ministry of Culture with primary responsibility for all American archaeological research, and seeks to support the investigation, preservation, and presentation of Greece's cultural heritage.

The ASCSA Publications Office, based in Princeton, New Jersey, disseminates the work of the School and publishes other important works on Greek studies, all to the highest editorial and production standards. The staff of the Publications Office is guided by a Publications Committee composed of leading scholars. All School publications adhere to the ASCSA Ethics Policy on the presentation of artifacts with no known provenience, designed to combat the illicit trade in antiquities. Proposals and manuscripts on topics related to the mission of the School are always welcome, and author guidelines can be found on our website:

Pindar's metaphor of the Isthmus as a bridge spanning two seas encapsulates the essence of the place and gives a fitting title for this volume of 17 essays on the history and archaeology of the area. The Isthmus, best known for the panhellenic Sanctuary of Poseidon, attracted travelers both before and after Pausanias's visit in the 2nd century A.D., but only toward the end of the 19th century were the ruins investigated and, a half century later, finally systematically excavated. More recently, archaeologists have surveyed the territory beyond the sanctuary, compiling evidence for a varied picture of activity on the wider Isthmus and the eastern Corinthia. The essays in this book celebrate 55 years of research on the Isthmus and provide a comprehensive overview of the state of our knowledge.

This volume complements Lerna V: The Neolithic Pottery of Lerna and completes the primary publication of the Neolithic remains retrieved during excavations conducted by the American School of Classical Studies at Athens from 1952 through 1958 at Lerna in the Argolid. It presents the buildings and other features of the Neolithic settlement with the related pottery, minor objects, lithics, and fauna, and includes a catalogue of the minor objects. The study reveals a small agricultural community of Middle Neolithic date with houses of mud brick on stone foundations, various storage installations and workplaces, and a few burials. The catalogue includes mostly utilitarian objects of typical forms in stone, bone, and terracotta, and a few objects of decorative or symbolic significance. Appendixes include a summary of the faunal remains by D. S. Reese.

The analysis of stable isotope ratios of carbon and nitrogen in bone collagen provides a powerful tool for reconstructing past diets, since it provides the only direct evidence of the foods that were consumed. This volume describes the application of this methodology to the archaeology of Greece, a country whose archaeobotanical remains have been extensively studied. The archaeological issues addressed include the importance of fishing; the possible early introduction of millet; the nature of child weaning; shifts in protein consumption; differential access to foods associated with social status as well as gender and age; and cultural differences in dietary patterns. Diet is strongly correlated with health or stress markers in teeth and bones and knowing what people ate has vital implications for our understanding of past environments and economies, subsistence strategies, and nutrition.

This volume publishes two bodies of material from the excavations conducted by the American School of Classical Studies at Athens in the Sanctuary of Demeter and Kore on Acrocorinth: Greek lamps and offering trays. The lamps include those made from the 7th through the 2nd century B.C., together with a few Roman examples. They served to provide light and to accompany the rites of sacrifice, and may also have served as dedicatory offerings. The offering trays differ from liknon-type offering trays; they support a variety of vessels rather than types of food and had a symbolic function, possibly serving as mnemata of the larger offering trays used in actual meals at the sanctuary. They are extremely common in the sanctuary and only rarely attested elsewhere. The lamps and trays provide a better understanding of the development of the material aspects of the cult of Demeter and Kore as it was practiced at the sanctuary.
